Mayor of Prague Sentenced To Die In German Purge

Otakar Klapka Said To Have Had Foreign Backing

BERLIN, Oct. 3 (P)—German dispatches reported tonight that the mayor of Prague, Otakar Klapka, had been sentenced to die as one of the leaders of an elaborate foreign-backed plot of sabotage, terrorism, espionage and rebellion against the Reich's protection.

With scant elaboration of the charge of foreign backing, advices from Prague, capital of the protectorate, said that the plot had extensive foreign support.

These dispatches were punctuated by the announcement that "several" more Czechs had been executed.

Nearly 600 Executed
With unofficial reports running far ahead of official figures, it was known that nearly 600 persons had been executed for military and political offenses in Germany and the conquered areas, since June 22 when the war with Russia started.

This total was compiled from official announcements and did not include executions in Bohemia-Moravia for the past two days and could not be viewed as up-to-date for the remainder of the occupied nations. Even so, Croatia, formerly part of Yugoslavia, was credited with 226 executions to lead the list.

A report, carried by Dienst Aus Deutschland, indicated that the Prague municipal administration (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Roosevelt Seeks To Sway Russian
Religious Views

President Says U. S. Has Raised Question in Discussions

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (P)—President Roosevelt revealed today that this government had raised the question of freedom of religion in Russia in discussing with Moscow officials the problems of supplying military equipment for the Soviet's war with Germany.

He declined to disclose any details and left open to speculation the possibility that guarantees of religious freedom may have been demanded in return for American assistance.

W. Averell Harriman, the head of a mission now in Moscow, was given instructions to take up the question of freedom of religion, Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference, but had not as yet made a report. Other efforts in this direction had been made previously, he said without elaboration. Presumably, these were through Lawrence Steinhardt, the American ambassador.

New Chapter to Controversy
Thus the president added a new chapter to the controversy on Russian religious freedom which began earlier in the week with his statement that the Soviet constitution provided for freedom of worship and freedom to oppose religion as well. This, he said, was similar to the system in effect in this country.

Numerous protests followed, based upon charges that while the Russian constitution might contain a freedom of religion clause, in actual practice, the situation was quite the opposite.

Yesterday, the White House took the unusual step of making public a stenographic transcript of what Mr. Roosevelt had said.

Mr. Roosevelt's original remarks were prompted by questions on a statement by the Polish ambassador here that a church for Polish Catholics and a synagogue for Polish Jews were being opened in Moscow.

Roosevelt Wants
Congress To Act
On Arming Ships

President Says He Will Not Move without Getting Orders

By RICHARD L. TURNER
WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (P)—President Roosevelt reiterated today that Congress would be asked to revise the neutrality act and said that a final decision on amendments to be requested would be reached at a conference with Senate leaders of both parties next Tuesday.

At the same time, he said that American merchant ships could not be armed against the attacks of Axis submarines without the approval of Congress. Congressional policy on that question had been so clearly expressed, he said, that it would not be right for him to try to wiggle out of it.

Wants Consent of Congress
The latter statement was made as part of his response to a request for comment on the proposal of Senate Pepper (D-Fla.) that Mr. Roosevelt simply revoke the proclamation issued under the neutrality act. This would have the effect of lifting most of the restrictions of that law.

The president said he had never heard of the Pepper plan which was advanced by the Florida senator in a Senate speech yesterday. Then, cautioning the reporters against trying to construe his remarks, Mr. Roosevelt went on to discuss one aspect of it, the possibility of redefining combat zones in such a way that American ships could carry cargoes to England.

He was asked whether an area of the sea in which one ship out of 500 was sunk was to be considered a danger area. He next asked whether (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Success against Nazis at Kharkov

Leningrad Defenders Hurled Back More Than a Mile, Moscow Says

MOSCOW, Saturday, Oct. 4 (P)—Leningrad's defenders have hurled the Germans back one to two miles in wide counter-attacks still in progress and Red armies of the South smashed a big German motorized force thrusting toward Kharkov, the Russians announced officially today.

The advance against the Germans by the Red armies of the northwest was followed, it was asserted, by the establishment of a strong new series of positions for the defense of Leningrad.

In the south, coordinated Soviet ground forces and airmen routed the Nazi motorized column attempting to smash Marshal Semeon Budenny's forces guarding the gateway to Kharkov, major manufacturing center of the industrial Donets Basin, the announcement said. Twenty-five Nazi tanks and eighty trucks were reported destroyed and 300 trucks and 100 motorcycles captured.

Report Violent Action
The early morning communiqué said violent action still erupted from one end of the front to the other and that at sea the Red fleet sank a German submarine in Arctic waters.

It was the battle of Leningrad that brought the best news of the day from the Russian standpoint. This was but one of a far-spread string of victories claimed in official reports and military dispatches which pictured the line as bending everywhere against the invaders and Nazi casualties running into many thousands.

Along the Central front German motorized columns attempting to smash through somewhere in the vicinity of Gomel were declared routed, after they had momentarily invested one village, by the counter-thrusts of Soviet tanks.

Heavy Action Reported
Action was heavy over vast stretches of this theater, for other reports told of the destruction of seventeen German transport columns and an elite Nazi battalion in attacks on German lines and rear supply columns which spread from Smolensk nearly 100 miles northwest to Vitebsk and from Smolensk 300 miles southwest to Minsk.

In this area, more than 3,000 German soldiers were declared left dead or wounded—in some cases by guerrilla action against the Nazi rear.

In another and unstated sector at the center Russian mechanized forces were said to have broken a German attempt at encirclement of a Red army infantry detachment.

Heavy Losses in South
In the South, counter-attacks upon German and Rumanian forces seeking to drive a wedge in the Red army lines about Odessa inflicted heavy losses on the invaders and broke their maneuver, front-line dispatches said. Red counter-thrusts were reported general about Odessa, where an improvement in the defensive position similar to that of Leningrad was claimed.

The Russians said two Rumanian bridges suffered particularly heavy (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

RUSSIA DEFEATED, HITLER TELLS NAZIS

Fuehrer Refers Mysteriously to a "Gigantic New Development" on the Eastern Front

BERLIN, Oct. 3 (P)—Adolf Hitler, explaining his long silence by saying that he had not been able to speak until "the enemy had been hit so hard that he never again will rise up," declared today to the German people in his first speech since last May that the paralyzing blow had now been dealt the Russians.

In a sixty-five-minute address to a hoarse cheering audience of thousands in the Berlin sportsplatz he announced that a "gigantic new development" had occurred on the Eastern front in the last forty-eight hours, but beyond this little new.

His speech, for which he came directly from the front to give a glowing review of German war successes, opened the Reich's third war winter campaign drive. But it appeared to have the wider objective of revitalizing the nation for the tasks still ahead.

Everything in the Russian campaign, he asserted, had gone according to plan, but he added:

Underestimated Russia
"We were not mistaken about anything except that we did not know how awfully big were the preparations against us and how closely Europe escaped Bolshevism."

There was no direct mention whatever of the United States, but the Fuehrer made a noble and sarcastic reference by declaring that Germany did not talk much about building armaments and had no (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

The president spoke during a program in which Wendell L. Wilkie and Tom C. Smith, St. Louis banker and a head of the mobilization, also participated.

The American people have given generously in the past two community chests, Mr. Roosevelt said, but he hoped this year they would give more than ever before.

"That is because," he added, "in a great world threat to our future we must, for ourselves and our country, preserve and make secure our values and the strength of our institutions."

"It is true that more people are at work in our land today than ever before. It is true that our national income is rising. But it is still true that millions of our fellow citizens are still undernourished, ill clad and poorly housed. Bad health maims too many of our American households."

"We must build up, not merely our army and our navy, but we must build up the well-being of our civilian population."

Is Eighth Panama Ship Destroyed Since Start of War; Details Are Lacking

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (P)—The 7,052-ton tanker I. C. White, owned by American interests and flying the flag of Panama, was torpedoed in the South Atlantic on Sept. 27, the freighter West Nilus reported today in announcing rescue of eighteen of the tanker's thirty-seven-man crew. All were believed Americans.

The West Nilus stated briefly that it had rescued the men from a single lifeboat 450 miles east of Recife, Brazil.

PICKS UP 16 OF CREW
Late this afternoon, the Standard Oil Company, (New Jersey) announced that the Moore-McCormack line freighter Mormacrey had picked up sixteen of the crew of the I. C. White, but said later it had no definite confirmation of the report which it said was received via ticker with no indication of its source. The Moore-McCormack line said it had had no word from the Mormacrey, due in Rio De Janeiro tonight or tomorrow, and had radioed the master.

The International Freighting Corporation, operators of the West Nilus, said the freighter would take her eighteen survivors to Recife, Brazil. The I. C. White was under the command of William Mello of Everett, Mass.

Sinking of the I. C. White, owned by the Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) through a subsidiary, the Panama Transport Company, was the eighth occurring to an American-owned ship since the outbreak of the war.

Bound for S. Africa
New York shipping records showed the I. C. White recently plied between South American oil ports and Halifax, N. S., but on her last trip was bound from Curacao, N. W. I., to Captown, South Africa.

Built at Chester, Pa., in 1920, she was the fourth Panama flag ship owned by American interests to have sunk since Aug. 17, when the Sessa was torpedoed 300 miles southwest of Iceland.

She apparently went down in the same general area but slightly to the west of the spot where the American flag freighter Robin Moor was torpedoed May 21.

Farther south, the Egyptian flag liner Zam Zam was destroyed by a German raider on April 17.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (P)—The I. C. White was the eighth American-owned ship sunk since the outbreak of the war. Others were:

The American-flag City of Rayville which struck a mine and sank in Australian waters in 1940. One death.

The American-flag Robin Moor, torpedoed, shelled and sunk by a German submarine in the South Atlantic May 21. No loss of life.

The Sessa, former Danish ship operated by Maritime Commission under Panamanian flag, sunk Aug. 17 by torpedo 300 miles southwest of Iceland. Twenty-four members of crew, including one American, lost.

Power Commission Says
Drought Has Created
Serious Situation

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (P)—The possibility of rationing of electricity to some New England industries developed today amid the continuing controversy over government restriction of gasoline sales on the Eastern seaboard.

Officials of the Federal Power Commission said the extended drought had resulted in a critical situation with respect to hydroelectric power in Maine and Western Massachusetts, and that a shortage of electricity might become general throughout New England.

To meet possible eventualities, they said, commission engineers (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

are working on a rationing plan to assure adequate energy for essential industries. This, an official added, may require some industries producing non-defense goods "to get along with less power for a few weeks."

It was indicated that the plan did not include rationing of electricity to household consumers or retail stores.

At the capitol, meantime, members of a special Senate committee investigating the gasoline situation said they would await a new report from Secretary of the Interior Ickes before taking any further action.

This report is expected to cover the present situation with respect to reserve stocks of petroleum products on the Atlantic coast and what effect the curtailment of (Continued on Page 2, Col. 1)

Latest Sinking Seized upon by Neutrality Foes

Advocates of Change in Policy Say Hitler Is Reaching West

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (AP)—Supporters of administration foreign policy quickly seized upon the sinking of the tanker I. C. White tonight as new evidence that the neutrality act should be amended. Some of the president's critics, however, declared their positions were unchanged by the incident.

The incident, said Senator Hill (D-Ala.), made it "plain that it is the determination of the Nazis to carry the war to the Western Hemisphere as well as to the rest of the world." He added:

"The Germans already have done enough to force us to revise our neutrality act. This is just another link in the chain. It is just another signal to us that we should take every possible step in our defense."

Rep. Luther A. Johnson (D-Tex.) took a similar view.

Johnson Favors Arming

"Incidents like the sinking of the American-owned tanker I. C. White," he said, "clearly demonstrate the need, and immediate necessity, of amending the neutrality law so as to permit the arming of American merchant vessels. I opposed the provision prohibiting arming of merchant vessels when the neutrality act was under consideration and have been against it all along but had to accept it when I supported the legislation."

But the I. C. White incident wrought no change in the viewpoint of Rep. Woodruff (R-Mich.).

"I am opposed to arming of our merchant vessels," he said, "and am against letting them go into war zones. It is doubtful in my opinion if we place armament on merchant ships that it will enable them to cope with aircraft and other offensive powers of the Axis Nations."

"Guns on merchant ships would further jeopardize the lives of crew members and increase the dangers in carrying out any particular enterprise."

Rep. Vorys Opposed

Rep. Vorys (R-O.) said the incident made him feel that the neutrality patrol should be strengthened, but still would not cause him to vote for arming cargo ships.

Senator Adams (D-Colo.) expressed doubt that American ship owners were entitled to count on American protection when their vessels flew the flags of other countries.

Roosevelt Seeks

Yesterday's White House statement said, in this connection:

Seeks Complete Freedom

"Since the Soviet constitution declares that freedom of religion is granted, it is hoped that in the light of the report of the Polish ambassador an understanding of complete freedom of religion is definitely on the way."

One of those who had criticized Mr. Roosevelt's first statement, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, today urged that the president take a direct hand in influencing Russia to grant full religious freedom now that he feels an entering wedge may have been driven. He expressed this hope prior to the president's disclosure of the instructions to Harriman.

Father Walsh, who represented the Vatican at Moscow in negotiations on religious freedom nearly 20 years ago, said that since material aid to be paid for by American taxpayers, was to go to Russia, it was "not too much to expect that the Soviet government will react and respond to the realities of the situation as they actually exist."

It was, he said, a "matter for deep gratification to the American people to know that the president is taking a direct interest at this time."

Rationing of

gasoline sales had had on these stocks.

The committee reported recently that it found no real shortage of gasoline and recommended lifting of restrictions which have cut deliveries of gasoline to filling stations by ten per cent.

It also reported that the committee, it said, had no intention of lifting these restrictions. He contended the committee had been misled by testimony of John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, that some 30,000 idle tank cars were available for movement of petroleum products from producing fields to the east coast. Instead of 20,000, it said, the number was about 5,000.

In rebuttal, Pelley told the committee that 41,993 tank cars were empty at 8 o'clock last Saturday morning. He figured that about 13,000 were empty after being unloaded in the normal course of business, and concluded that about 28,993 represented surplus cars which could be used to serve the eastern seaboard.

19 Rescued after Crash of Clipper Plane; 2 Babies Reported Missing

Pan-American Airways Ship Wrecked in San Juan Harbor

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 3 (AP)—Pan-American Airways said tonight that nineteen of twenty-one passengers aboard a four-motored seaplane that made a crash landing in San Juan harbor were safe but that two babies were missing.

The infants, a Pan-American spokesman said, were Marie and Zuzie Russo, who boarded the plane with their mother Mrs. Angelina Russo, at Port Au Prince, Haiti.

There was a possibility the babies might have been rescued by a small boat that had not yet reported to authorities.

All six crew members of the clipper, which water-landed but did not sink, were saved. Pan-American said the plane apparently swung around on hitting the water.

Pan-American said there were no serious injuries among the rescued passengers.

Mrs. Russo suffered from nervous shock and her brother Serales, whose first name was unavailable, received a slight head injury.

do not know about as yet. No one is going to loaf."

He summarized the work accomplished during the five-day convention and envisioned post-war era in which persons would participate in a two-job curriculum—a regular job for about five hours a day, and a secondary job which would take up the slack in expanded leisure time imposed by the efficiency of new developments in machinery.

"There will be jobs in crafts, truck gardening, recreation and other lines of work," Warburg explained. "The national recreation association has given study to the problem and the government is going to need our leaders."

More Facilities in West

"On the West coast things seem to have progressed more than in the East so far as providing recreation for both young and old. But that is probably because the Western cities are newer and planned later. The East is bound to follow."

In an earlier discussion group, James Mulholland, recreation director of New York city's department of parks, recommended that parks and play centers, used exclusively by children during the day, should be floodlighted at night so that adults might also enjoy recreational facilities.

"The need of night operation in public recreation areas for the adolescent and adult needs no explanation," Mulholland declared. "Night recreation in floodlighted playgrounds, park of school yard should be substituted for the coarser types of commercialized amusement and street play at night."

Decreases Delinquency

"We have found that there has been a decrease in delinquency and vandalism and street accidents at night in districts where we have floodlighted playgrounds and recreation areas."

Discussing the special recreation problems of the smaller towns and cities, Frederick Martin, superintendent of recreation at Brattleboro, Vt., emphasized the importance of taking full advantage of all community resources, "thereby immeasurably easing the problems of the small town recreation department and incidentally strengthening this position in the community."

"The town highway, water, fire, police, welfare and school departments provide countless instances of aid to a small-town recreation department," he said.

Klapka was alleged to have headed an organization which gave financial aid to the families of fugitive Czechs and arranged the escape of others.

A DNB dispatch from Prague said that several persons, including a colonel in the former Czechoslovak army, all sentenced to death by courts martial at Prague and Brno, had been executed on charges of plotting high treason, economic sabotage and possession of weapons without a permit.

(The Prague radio as heard in London said that fourteen persons were executed today following court martial sentences at Brno and that an additional 131 defendants had been handed over to the Gestapo.)

The Berlin official gazette announced confiscation of the property of Jan G. Masaryk, son of Thomas G. Masaryk, founder of the Czechoslovak republic, who was the republic's last minister to London. (Masaryk now is foreign minister of the Czech provisional government in exile.)

Dry Weather Hits Kentucky Industry

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 3 (AP)—Dry weather was one of two reasons cited by United States District Attorney Eli H. Brown 3rd for a reduction in the manufacture of Kentucky moonshine in recent months.

The second reason? Stricter law enforcement, the district attorney explained.

need to depend on capitalism to create national defense."

He declared triumphantly that contrary to the situation in the World War Germany now had unlimited arms and supplies and said that the only present problem was one of transport.

Such vast stores had been accumulated, he added, that in the beginning of the war "I was able to lay idle the production of many materials." "I know there is no longer any enemy which we could not overpower with the munitions on hand. And if you sometimes read in the newspapers about the gigantic plans of other states, what they all think they are going to do and begin, and when you hear about sums in the billions, then, my fellow citizens, remember what I am now saying:

"In the service of this (the German) fight we have engaged the whole continent."

Stresses Three Points

Three points he emphasized, all dealing with the present status of the "new order."

"First," he repeated, "we are putting the whole continent into our service."

"Second, we do not talk of capital but of the strength of labor."

"Third, (the fact) that we are not talking doesn't mean that we are not acting."

Much of what he had to say was intended to show Germany's excellent military position.

About 2,500,000 Russian prisoners now have been taken, he added, along with 22,000 Red guns in German hands, 18,000 tanks destroyed or captured and 14,500 Russian planes destroyed.

He was careful to pay tribute both to the German soldier and those on the home front, his apparent purpose being to nourish the hatred of Bolshevism and to imbue the consciousness of the Germans with the conviction that they are the world's elite.

Calls Russians Animals

The Russian forces he called "not human beings but animal beasts," adding "that what Bolshevism has made of them."

Again he declared, speaking mainly of Britain, that well knowing the "blood, misery, suffering and sacrifice" of war, he had sought peace, again he asserted that his repeated efforts had been rebuffed.

"Churchill," said the fuhrer, "kept saying: 'I want war!'"

"Well," and this was snapped off sharply—"he has it now!"

As to Russia, he insisted that Stalin had from the beginning failed to live up to the German-Russian pact.

"By August and September of last year," he went on, "it became clear that I had an enemy in the back ready to stab at any time."

In the months that followed, Hitler went on, Russian mobilization began and because the lives of "hundreds of thousands were at stake" he kept silent.

Surprise Principal Weapon

But, he said, surprise was one of his weapons and when he saw an opponent preparing to attack it was his policy to beat him to it.

"It was the hardest decision of my life," he added.

Referring to older affairs in the west, he remarked that "it must have been providence" which prevented Germany from coming to an understanding with Poland—apparently implying that greater objectives were now possible.

"We gained friendship with Italy and Japan," he said, "but unfortunately not with that nation I courted most—Britain."

"The decision presently being fought out," he shouted in apparent reference to the Russian campaign, "is for the next hundred years."

Seeks Lord's Help

"Nations," he cried in closing, "help yourself, then the Lord won't deny his help."

England Delays German-British Prisoner Swaps

Nazis Are Aboard Ships When a Sudden Halt Is Called

By EDDY GILMORE

NEWHAVEN, Eng., Oct. 3 (AP)—British authorities called a sudden halt tonight on exchange under the protection of a mercy truce of some 3,000 German and British prisoners of war, although the crippled and blinded Germans already had been carried or laid aboard two hospital ships in this strangely brilliant harbor.

The war office announced postponement of the repatriation just as the second of the two ships was ready to sail and the first already had moved out of the lighted harbor to await a dawn escort.

Although British bombers attacked channel ports in occupied France throughout the day and continued their attacks this evening, there has been no word of any raid in the area about Dieppe, the destination of the hospital ships, and no specific reason was given for the postponement.

Under the agreement 1,500 Germans are to be exchanged at Dieppe, some five hours by sea from Newhaven, for 1,500 wounded Tommies. The Tommies will be returned in the same ships, Dinard and St. Bollen.

The war office announcement said merely that the delay was occasioned by a message from Berlin and added that "the government are in communication with the German government and it is to be hoped it will be possible to make a further statement within twenty-four hours."

Thus the delay is expected to be only temporary, and the German prisoners will remain on board the two ships.

losses and the Red forces claimed the capture of more than sixty field guns, "many scores" of machine-guns and vast supplies of smaller arms.

In the far north, above Leningrad, Russian coastal positions were officially described as still firmly in hand.

Finns Driven Back

Finnish attempts to storm several small islands near Hangö, the Soviet naval base at the Northern approach to the Gulf of Finland, were repulsed, it was stated. Repeated German efforts to enter Riga Bay and take the fortified islands of Oesel and Dagoe were reported similarly rebuffed.

More than eighty German transports, said the official Soviet newspaper, had been driven off, damaged or destroyed in these persistent Nazi attempts, which have been in intermittent progress for weeks. In the latest action reported a German cruiser and two destroyers were reported sunk.

In the battle for Leningrad itself, at least 1,500 German soldiers and officers were reported killed in the present and continuing action there, and several thousand wounded.

tion which can throw this country into undeclared naval war against the will of our people, and without asking the consent of Congress, can by similar methods prevent freedom of speech among us."

He spoke of the closing of lecture halls to him, and smear campaigns against him, "everyone who opposes intervention," and said:

"If we have friends on the government payroll, we hesitate to be seen talking to them because we know that, as in the totalitarian countries, they may lose their jobs as a result."

He denied that the will of the people was behind the national administration's "steps towards war," saying:

"When the majority of Americans approved lifting the arms embargo, when they approved the transfer of battleships to England, when they approved the 'Lend-Lease' bill, and all those other steps 'short of war,' they approved them because the administration said that these were steps to increase the security of our nation, and to decrease the likelihood of war."

Calls Roosevelt Deceiver

"In other words, the people believed what was told them by their president and his administration. . . . They had implicit faith in the promises of the president and his administration. They believed, and now they find they have been deceived."

The interventionists claim we have reached our present position by taking steps which the majority of the people approved of, and that therefore the will of the people has prevailed. The fact is that we have reached this position by following the false promises of the interventionists, and our administration in Washington. Not one step the administration has taken in these last two years has placed honestly before the people as a step toward war."

"The interventionist leaders knew that not one step could be taken if it had been placed honestly before the people as a step toward war. And so they consciously and deceptively called their steps 'short of war' and for the purpose of American defense."

He added that the interventionists were "deceiving the people."

Leonard H. Thuss, 39, 824 North Mechanic street, formerly connected with the Maryland theater orchestra and concert bands here, died yesterday.

A native of this city, he was a son of the late August and Christina (Phillips) Thuss.

Surviving are his widow, the former Martha Layman, and three brothers, Charles and William Thuss, this city; Raymond Thuss, Detroit; three sisters, Mrs. Charles Chenoweth, Mrs. Samuel E. Grimmer and Miss Rose Thuss, all of this city.

Funeral services will be held at the home Monday by the Rev. H. Hall Sharp, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran church.

John Ward Killed

John Ervin Ward, son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey A. Caldwell, 306 Maryland avenue, was instantly killed Sunday in the explosion of a vulcanizing machine at the Virts Retaiding Tire Company, Thomasville, Ga.

Mr. Ward was a brother-in-law of George B. Sapp, 308 Maryland avenue, and was employed for several years by the Hawkinson Tread Service here.

counsel to protect his rights and that he was without the use of his delivery car for nearly two days, which seriously hindered and delayed him in the operation of the business, causing him to lose customers whom he could not serve during that time.

In addition, the suit says, the proceedings injured not only his business, but his reputation and credit as well, and "put him to public ridicule among his friends, business associates and the general public."

Roosevelt Wants

five sinkings out of 500 ships, or ten sinkings made the zone one of danger.

Silent About Zones

He offered no replies to these rhetorical questions, remarking only that the neutrality law did not specify any percentages, but left the decision to him. Additionally, he noted that the crew of a ship struck last week demanding bonuses for a voyage to the West Indies, on the ground that the islands lay in a danger zone, although, actually there had been no sinkings in those waters.

The question, he said, was somewhat similar to the old issue of what constitutes an effective blockade, which under what he called the old international law, other nations must honor. If half the ships get through, or a quarter of them, he said, is the blockade effective?

During the Civil war, he continued, the North proclaimed a blockade of Southern ports, but England declined to recognize it because now and then a blockade runner got through.

"Is this to say that combat zones, as construed by you, may be changed?" a correspondent inquired.

Asked Direct Reply

Mr. Roosevelt replied that he was merely stating the situation as it existed and again cautioned against efforts to interpret his remarks.

Pepper's proposal, meanwhile, evoked the opposition of Senator Taft (R-O.), who said that if Mr. Roosevelt should set aside the provisions of the neutrality law by executive order "it would only represent another attempt to involve the United States in war without the consent of Congress." He added:

"Only Congress can declare war, and if war is being considered then the whole question should be submitted to Congress."

land and stay out." The men he sentenced to the House of Correction for one year, then as they paled and squirmed nervously, he added that the sentences would be suspended for two years on the same conditions.

Funds totaling $361.96 which were seized from the four and from their automobiles were ordered returned to them, and it was from this amount, $315.11 in coins, that the fines and costs were paid.

Twenty dollars was also ordered deducted from this "jackpot," representing the amount allegedly stolen at the Clary Club. Judge Sloan directed Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe to retain this amount subject to the further orders of the court. He stated emphatically that it would not be returned to Casper Taylor, owner and proprietor of the club.

Slot Machines Introduced

One of the highlights of the hearing was the introduction into evidence by Morris Baron, defense attorney, of one of the slot machines supposedly drilled by the quartet. Placed on the counsel table, Baron had John F. Zimmerman, mechanic, attempt to drill a hole in the machine with one of the drills allegedly seized from the quartet. Zimmerman made a comparatively deep indentation within five minutes, and testified that such drills could pierce the metal jackets of the one-armed bandits.

Zimmerman, called by the defense, was not cross-examined by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris, who instructed Court Clerk Robert Jackson to list him as a state witness.

Judge Sloan, who viewed the conclusion of these proceedings with impatience, then inquired: "Are you through with that machine?"

Told by counsel on both sides that they were, he ordered, "Then get it out of here."

As Taylor helped his bartender, Nelson Rosenmerkle, carry it from the courtroom, the jurist added, "And if you'll take my advice, you won't take it home with you."

Taylor indicated he would take the advice.

The machine had been brought to the court room by Taylor on a subpoena issued for the defense.

Called Peculiar Case

Defense Attorney Baron, in a brief closing argument, described the case as "very peculiar," with his clients accused of robbing a "one-armed bandit." He branded as a paradox the circumstance that the protection of the law was sought to help carry out a constant violation of the law, referring to the fact that slot machines are illegal in Allegany county.

The only defendants to take the stand in their own behalf were the two women, although Blackwell was called to testify only to the effect that he did not grant permission, directly or indirectly, to police to search his car the night the four were arrested. It was the defense contention that the contents of the car, including a considerable amount of money, were illegally seized and should be returned.

Prosecution witnesses, including City Patrolman T. T. Griffin and State Police Sergeant Charles W. Magaha, had said that Blackwell had, in effect, granted permission to take and search the car.

Repudiates Confession

Mrs. Reynolds repudiated a confession in which she allegedly admitted that she and her cohorts had made a racket of "beating slot machines" for the past year, leaving a trail of plundered jackpots in their wake. Such was the purpose of the trip here from St. Louis, she supposedly confessed.

The state's attorney emphasized her purported statement that she and her three confederates paid their expenses out of a common pool of their loot, with an agreement to divide equally any surplus.

Mrs. Reynolds declared that so many questions were fired at her that she became confused and didn't know what she was saying. Her statement that State's Attorney Harris had threatened to see that she got sent to the House of Correction for eighteen months was overwhelmingly denied by state witnesses, and Harris made a point to have her testimony on this score taken down by the court stenographer.

The defendant also sought to challenge the statement by saying she did not sign the one she read, intimating that a "phony" was slipped over on her. But this was explained by showing that she had started to sign a carbon copy and then was instructed to sign the original.

lines beneath the street and the gas meter which measured gas into Wagner's market was situated in a hallway next door and it was intact. The meter which was in Heinrich and Jenkins store was found in the wreckage and it also was intact.

A large meat cooler in the rear of Wagner's market which contains a large supply of meat products was beginning to cast off a strong odor and Dr. Theodore R. Shrop, city and county health officer, ordered the meat removed this morning to prevent any unhealthful condition from arising.

The badly damaged building on the north side of the wrecked structures will probably be repaired if inspection after removal of the rest of the debris on the explosion site reveals the damage to be no worse than can now be ascertained. Dr. Frank M. Wilson, one of the owners, said last night. This structure contains the Nu Bakery, the Pullman Grill, and an apartment on the second floor.

THE DREAMER

The Only Time He Did Any Work Was When He Bought the Ring—Which Is Reason Enough for What Mildred Does

By MARY DRAKE

He had worked for 18 weeks once. That was when he'd bought her the diamond ring on time. She was turning it now and each time the diamond in its white gold setting came to the top of her finger she examined it as though she had never seen it before.

"I'm Gonna Quit!" said, pushing him down into his chair.

Johnny raised his brows. "Well, for the love of Mike!"

"Sit there," Mildred called back as she went out the door.

She got on a Clark streetcar because she didn't want to take long. She kept watching out the window until she came to Chicago avenue. From there on she could see hock shops along the street. She got off the car and went into one that had a bicycle chained to a stand on the sidewalk.

A little old man came from the back. Mildred was still squeezing her left hand with her right. As the old man went behind the counter, she took off her ring. "It cost $125," she told him nervously.

He took a jeweler's glass and screwed it into his eye. "Fifteen dollars," he said.

"But it cost $125!" Mildred told him.

"You're going to get it back, aren't you?" the man said. "I'm going to give you a ticket so you can redeem it. The charge is a dollar the first month and 50 cents every month after that. You can have the ring whenever you want it."

Mildred considered. "How much is that bike out in front?" she asked.

The man smiled. "You want to buy it?"

"How much is it?" Mildred said, looking at her ring on the counter. "Well, you could have it for $15," the old man said as though he hated to part with it.

"I'll take it," Mildred said. "The man took out a printed form. 'I'll give you a contract and pawn ticket. You can get your ring when you want it.'"

Mildred waited impatiently as he typed her name and address, then, finally, handed her the form and went to unfasten the lock on the bicycle.

Embarrassed, with panhandlers and hoboes looking her over, she wheeled the bike down Clark street. She looked around for a small boy, but reached the block in which she had left Johnny without seeing one. A newsboy came along selling papers. Mildred stopped him. "Would you like to earn a quarter?"

The boy showed a few broken teeth.

Mildred hunted in her bag for a pencil and piece of paper. She laid the paper on her bag and wrote on it.

"There's a young fellow in Doheny's," she told the newsboy, folding the note. "He's very tan and he's wearing a blue shirt and red tie. Take this bicycle in and tell him it's for him and give him this note."

"A joke, huh?" the boy tittered.

Mildred said, "Yeah, a joke," and handed him a quarter.

The boy tipped his cap. When the tavern door closed behind him she opened her purse and took out the contract and the pink pawn-ticket and began to tear. When she had torn them to tiny bits she threw them into the air and watched them fall. She swallowed and went on. —Distributed by United Features Syndicate.

Lessons Must Be Learned From This Disaster

A SUDDEN, UNHERALDED, TERRIFIC EXPLOSION, such as that which demolished two business places in the heart of the downtown section, damaged several others and caused physical injury, directly and indirectly, to more than two score persons, is, of course, a deplorable occurrence, and everyone is naturally anxious to learn the cause in order that steps may be taken to prevent the recurrence of such disasters.

At the time these lines were written the cause was still a mystery, but all governmental and utility agencies concerned were diligently seeking to unearth the facts regarding it. Their efforts are to be commended and their work should be relentlessly continued until those facts are determined.

That such a violent explosion occurred in the ordinary operation of comparatively small business establishments is almost incredible in this day and time when machinery and appliances of all kind have been developed to such a high degree of efficiency and are generally equipped with all safeguards. This explosion was probably of a freak variety and, if so, it is a grim reminder that the unusual is always a possibility despite the ingenuity of man and the protective measures and agencies that have been developed.

It is superfluous to say that the whole community appreciates and praises the prompt and efficient work of the fire, police and health departments, the utility concerns, the home guard, the American Legionnaires and the always ready and competent Red Cross disaster service. All measured up to the emergency in splendid manner.

While the explosion was costly in the human injuries inflicted and the material damage wrought, there is thankfulness that the former was no greater than appears to have been the case at this writing with no lives lost and recovery chances good with all of the most severe hurt. The tremendous force of the sudden blast, as indicated by the extensive wreckage resulting, was such that it was a veritable miracle that a number were not killed outright and more were not critically injured. Such a frightful occurrence makes the whole community kin, and the fervent hope is held by all that the injured will have speedy recovery.

From such a disaster the people of Cumberland should profit by experience. Of course, the lesson of prevention cannot be accurately impressed until the facts of the occurrence are brought forth. Meanwhile, however, the need for inspection of all possible sources of explosion, fire and the like, and the provision of all known safeguards is made obvious. Such of that as well may be done should be done forthwith, not only in business places and in industrial establishments, but also in the homes.

Arsenals Are Always Drab

THE STREETS of America are destined within a brief period to give testimony to the fact that this nation is actively engaged in the struggle of the democracies against the totalitarian world. From OPM comes two announcements that indicate this clearly.

Not only will December auto production be cut 48.4 per cent from the 1940 level, but so-called "bright work" and other ornamental but non-functioning parts of automobiles, which absorb large quantities of chrome and other defense metals, soon will be banned. No date has been set for the latter move, but it is indicated that auto manufacturers will be requested to eliminate such trimmings voluntarily.

Obviously, it is not pleasant to contemplate American streets and highways deprived of some of their gaudy show. Americans are accustomed to see myriad new and shining automobiles on the streets each year; they expect to behold them displaying new departures in styling, novel and beautiful trimmings. The glamor undoubtedly will be missed, and the scene may bring heaviness of heart to many.

But at least this is something that does not come under the category of "blood, sweat and tears," the program promised to nations, like Britain, which are actively engaged in the current struggle. The United States is the arsenal of democracy, and arsenals always are drab.

Garnering the Fruit Of Thoughtlessness

THE TIME when it is still safe for the New Deal administration to dodge realities has long since passed.

For eight long years the administration has been postponing one difficult domestic situation after another. Always the "solution" has been the expedient—borrow money and buy a way out.

The same attempt has been made in our necessarily gigantic defense effort. Too long the administration thinking has been tinged with the great New Deal fallacy that a huge money appropriation will do the trick.

No comprehensive plan was made. The idea seemed to be "spend the money and let the consequences take care of themselves." Now the administration is garnering the bitter fruit of its thoughtlessness. Suddenly it has waked up to the knowledge that millions of men working in small industries face disaster from a new and unplanned depression—"priorities unemployment."

Hurried attempts are being made to avoid the calamity, but in the background the whisper "it cannot be avoided" is always heard. Maybe no wit is true that the pound of cure will not accomplish what an ounce of realistic thinking and planning would have. Maybe the people will accept the doctrine that the dislocation of small business, the backbone of our economy, was inevitable.

But, if there is any way out—and hope remains that the door is not as yet closed—it should be sought and action should be taken before it is too late to remedy the damage.

Dry Spell Prompts Fire Precautions

WITH the countryside scorched and parched by the long dry spell, motorists are urged by the Keystone Automobile Club to take all precautions against starting forest fires.

In co-operation with state and national governments, the club has issued an appeal to motorists to help prevent such fires, which annually cause a loss in this country of approximately $50,000,000 in timberland alone. Ninety per cent of the fires are declared by government officials to be due to some form of carelessness—discarded cigarette stubs, matches, the smoldering tobacco from pipes and unextinguished camp fires.

Aside from the terrific losses in timber, it is pointed out, the raging forest fires cause destruction on a vast scale of game and fish. It is estimated that the annual losses in game exceed the combined toll taken by hunters and anglers, with the distinction that fires cause total, permanent loss in the ravaged areas.

Motorists are urged to be extremely careful in discarding cigarette stubs along the highway. A carelessly tossed cigarette may land in a pile of leaves or dry pine needles. From such small beginnings have grown many great forest fires, according to the authorities. The number of preventable forest fires each year in the United States is given as approximately 150,000.

A few simple rules for fire prevention are given by the club, as follows:

1. Never throw a lighted cigarette or the ashes from a pipe from a moving car.
2. Be certain stubs are "dead" before you discard them.
3. Never throw a lighted match from car window or while walking in woods. Always be certain it is "out" and then break it in two as an extra precaution.

It is also suggested that motorists report all fires, however slight, so that prompt action may be taken by fire-fighting forces.

The Hills Ahead And Behind

A WRITER makes note of the disappearing hill. It exists in every sphere of life, being found in the home, in the office, in the factory, in the store. It is encountered, in fact, in every life problem, in every situation fraught with anxiety.

Today's hills loom big. Tomorrow's are mountains. Yesterday's are but ant heaps. Very few, indeed, are those which are never surmounted.

We need these hills in our daily life, to stimulate and strengthen and encourage us. They develop our will power, our endurance, our imagination.

We have the real ones hereabout in our Western Maryland territory, and we do not half appreciate their worth. They stimulate the imagination, cultivate the mental powers all around. That is why people like to drive around in this part of the world.

We are always curious to see and to know what is just over the hill beyond. And we always find the ones behind, the disappearing hills, were easy after all, and the mind not so dumb in grasping their position, their size and their portent.

When we worry too much about the hills ahead, it helps somewhat to look at those behind.

A Canadian golf club has established a rule forbidding male players to appear on the course in shorts. It is good to know that somebody is doing something to beautify the landscape.

Confessions

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Whenever I hear an orator shouting about "the common people" I wonder whom he is talking about. Does he include himself or does he mean just you and me?

My ambition, when I was only so high, was to learn to jump off a freight train backwards—as brake-men do.

I gawk at steel workers, high up there in the air, and envy them without wishing I were where they are.

When I meet you I ask you how the baby is. That's to give me a chance, in my turn, to talk about my family.

I wish I could remember my dreams. It doesn't seem fair that I should not know what's happening inside my own brain when I'm asleep.

I never did like the taste of an indelible pencil, but I was never able to resist putting one into my mouth.

I've never been able to finish a cross-word puzzle; but I'm a very good helper-out.

I can't guess riddles.

I like those delicatessen shops that have a box of dried fish in the open where I can swipe a piece to chew while I'm being served.

I never can make up my mind whether to play safe or to take a chance. So I take a chance when I should play safe and act the cautious citizen when I should be bold.

The new moon, golden and fair, always reminds me of a slice of Persian melon and should be as fragrant.

I wonder if little birds are as happy as they seem to be.

When I stop running for streetcars, I KNOW I'll be middle aged in spirit, too.

Johnson Praises Intolerance Fight By Ring Champion

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Here is a letter written by a man of prominence in one field of American endeavor to a man of prominence in quite a different field. I may say that it received a sympathetic—not to say enthusiastic response. Note that the letter was written two days before the Nova fight:

Joe Louis, Heavyweight Champion of the World.

"Greenwood Lake, N. Y., Sept. 27th, 1941.

"Dear Mr. Baruch:
"I have been reclassified by the selective draft board, and I expect to be called into the service of my country. This may cause me to retire from the ring.

"But before I retire, I want to put up one more fight—the best of my career—to help my people.

"The hardest fight I ever had was against prejudice and intolerance. My people know what I mean. They are all fighting their way up, and I want to open the door of opportunity a little wider for them. The fight I propose to make will not be staged in an arena against one particular opponent, but out in the open across the country. If I could get a 'gate' as big as I've ever seen in the Yankee stadium and turn it over to the department of Race Relations of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America for the splendid work that department is doing on behalf of the negro people and better relations with their white neighbors, I'd feel like a real champion.

"I propose to start the 'gate' with my own contribution, and I want you to subscribe for a box, a ringside seat or other reservation. This is one purse which does not have to be shared with promoters or managers. Every cent will be used to better the condition of my people and in creating better human relations in America.

"Will you co-operate by sending your cheque or money order, in any amount, payable to Frank H. Mann, treasurer, and mail it today? If you help me win this time, I'll feel that I've won the greatest fight of my life. Thank you. Sincerely yours, (Signed) "JOE LOUIS."

I have no doubt from its content that this same letter went to many people and that Joe didn't actually compose the very appealing missive. To me that doesn't make any difference. Joe's conduct over the years in the most difficult kind of tests of courage, fortitude, sportsmanship and plain Americanism that could be given any man has made that letter possible and true. The very able phrasing wouldn't mean a thing without that and couldn't be made to mean a thing.

—o—

Made Sport Cleaner

Joe Louis never squawked, boasted, lied, faked, dodged a fight nor tried to milk his popularity to his personal advantage. He lifted a sport that in the hands of some of his white brethren had threatened to become a racket into a cleaner and more respectable atmosphere. In other words, he is not merely an outstanding credit to "his people," as he calls them, he is an American asset. Nothing emphasizes that more than his eagerness to surrender his fabulous income and prospects and get into uniform as a private soldier.

By example, he has done something more in the hard way than could ever be done in years of preaching. He has taken race prejudice, as far as he is concerned at least, out of the fight game. Considering the emotional nature of that field, this seems incredible, but sitting in at his Nova battle it seemed to me that most sympathies were with the champion and this was strange, not merely because there is a natural wolf-pack tendency to wish to see the leader downed, but also because Lou Nova himself is far above the average type of white contender.

I don't know just what Joe plans as his "last fight and the best" but I hope and believe that it will have the widest possible support. (Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

YES, YES, AND AFTER CAPITALISM WHAT?

Use of Letter about Stalin and the Poles Is the Cause of Much Surmise

A Vital Part Of Defense

From the Pittsburgh Press

IT is true, as Federal Price Administrator Leon Henderson said in his speech at Trenton, N. J., that the all-out defense program demands an "actual curtailment" of consumer goods output.

Plainly, there aren't enough men, materials and machines to produce everything needed for defense and lend-lease and at the same time to produce everything that manufacturers would like to make, and that customers would like to buy.

But there is this further truth, and it was encouraging to find Mr. Henderson stressing it:

"We in Washington also have a responsibility to see that reductions in output of civilian goods are not carried too far, to see that civilian morale and civilian industry are not harmed unnecessarily. . . . You can't keep a civilian economy going without giving it some co-operation."

This means, he added, that minimum supplies or scarce materials must be reserved for civilian uses; that hoarding of such materials by industries and government agencies must end; even, perhaps, that part of the "huge stock piles" which have been hoarded should be redistributed to plants urgently needing materials either for defense or for essential civilian production.

We believe that keeping the civilian economy going to the fullest possible extent is a vital part of the defense program, and should be so regarded. And this will require not merely "some" but much and constant co-operation.

Curtailed of consumer goods output, though to some degree inevitable, should be recognized for what it is—an evil which makes itself felt in unemployment, in higher prices and in loss of tax revenue to the government. Whatever can be done to prevent it, by allocating scarce materials where they will create the most employment and produce the most goods and by encouraging the development and use of substitutes for these materials, will be very much worth while.

Morning Motto

The first and best victory is to conquer self; to be conquered by self, of all things, the most shameful and vile.—PLATO.

By MARK SULLIVAN

President Roosevelt, at a press conference last Tuesday, participated in a bit of propaganda which has been widely discussed.

The discussion has focused almost solely on what Mr. Roosevelt said at the press conference. Better understanding may be promoted by reciting the whole of the incident.

The circumstances were these: There is in Washington a Polish ambassador. (That is, ambassador of the exiled Polish government in London. Poland as a country ceased to exist in 1939, when it was overrun by Hitler and Stalin, at that time in agreement, who divided the country between them.)

The Polish ambassador wrote a letter to Secretary of State Hull, to be conveyed to President Roosevelt. The letter said that Russia (which previously oppressed the Poles harshly) has now granted certain privileges to Poles. The Poles referred to are mainly those who had been deported into Russia at the time Poland was conquered. These deportees are about the only Poles that Russia now has control of, except perhaps some scattered communities. The part of Poland which Russia got at the time she divided the country between herself and Germany, has now been taken by Germany.

—o—

Obvious Purpose

To the Poles in Russia, Stalin has granted—so the ambassador says—"freedom of worship for both Christian and Jews. . . . A Polish Catholic church is about to be opened in Moscow, as well as a synagogue for Polish Jews."

The purpose of Stalin is obvious. He wants the Poles in Russia to join the Russian army, and otherwise help in the war against Germany. And he wants to encourage the Poles in what was formerly Poland, now held by Germany, to resist Germany, practice sabotage, and otherwise be of help to Russia.

That of course was the motive of Stalin in granting religious freedom to the Poles. But what was the motive in making the letter public? The letter and the publication of it, we can safely assume, was for effect on American opinion—especially at this moment when there is in Congress a bill involving whether we shall give lease-lend aid to Russia the same as to Britain. The purpose, we can assume, was to make Poles in America, formerly haters of Russia and Communism, now feel kindly. It was to make Polish Catholics and all other Catholics in America, feel that maybe the hatred of Communism for religion has changed.

Effect by Washington
There has already been some effort, by our own government at Washington, to allay hostility felt by some Catholics toward Russia and Communism. Some of the effort has been public, as the letter of Catholic Supreme Court Justice Murphy advising Catholics to support the administration's attitude toward Russia. Some of the effort has not been made public.

On the day the letter of the Polish ambassador was published, President Roosevelt had a press conference. Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the letter. He asked the correspondents to read Article 124 of the Russian constitution.

He said in effect that the status of religion in Russia is the same as in the United States.

Not a Guarantee

Persons who looked up the Russian constitution found that Article 124 reads in part: "Freedom of religious worship, and freedom of anti-religious propaganda, is recognized for all citizens." That is a long way from the guarantee of religious freedom in the Constitution of the United States.

Persons familiar with Russia, said that the whole Russian constitution was adopted to delude opinion outside Russia, and that Communist practice does not pretend to conform to the pseudo-constitution. The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., stationed in Russia in 1922 and ever since a student of Russian affairs, recited in detail the harsh persecutions of all religions by the "Frankly atheistic government" of Russia. "The Catholic clergy," Father Walsh said, "has been practically annihilated."

—o—

Branded As Untrue

In the light of this, Mr. Roosevelt's assertion that freedom of religion in Russia is the same as in the United States, was described by Methodist Bishop Raymond J. Wade of Detroit, in words perhaps too angry, as "utterly misleading" and "obviously untrue."

Subsequent developments included a theory that Mr. Roosevelt is trying to persuade the Communists to be tolerant toward religion. Presumably Mr. Roosevelt starts with the wish to help Russia against Hitler, and wishes the American people to support that policy. To get this support is no doubt the purpose of whatever it is that is now going on. The American people, seeing things go on that they do not fully understand, will probably preserve a careful distinction between help to Russia against Hitler, and on the other hand, Communism. Dealing with Communism, the rule is, keep your feet on the ground, and your fingers crossed.

A Modern Miracle

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

The time was when the only thing startling about a machine fit to print was the fact that, despite the dire predictions of the inventor's friends, it actually worked. How far removed we are from that innocent and unbelieving age is illustrated in what happened the other day at a New Jersey factory.

An automatic vending machine for dispensing soft drinks at a nickel each went sadly awry. The workers who wasted their nickels on it walked away, warning their companions and crying "Gyp." One woman evidently didn't hear them; for she deposited a coin and things began to happen.

The machine went wild, mixing syrup and seltzer recklessly without pausing for receipts. Willing hands lined up more than 200 cups. When the cups and syrup gave out, the machine continued to pour seltzer into the drain. Out of pity, someone finally pulled the electric cord, and the blamed thing sputtered to a halt.

In itself the occurrence was strange enough, but the reception it got was even stranger. News of it spread rapidly. The Associated Press heard of it. Even the august New York Times printed an account of it. It was news. And why? Simply because in an age when most machines work perfectly, this one didn't. It was almost miraculous.

State Department Is Puzzled Often By Latin America

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

The bill for its establishment being footed by the United States, no Latin-American country appears to have any objection to the setting up of a good, strong military base or two on its soil, with a view to all-around Western Hemispherical defense.

Hints do reach Washington, however, of an inclination on the Charles P. Stewart part of some of the southern republics to look rather skittish upon the establishment of such bases on the soil of their neighbor republics. Naturally, they want a formidable base equipped outside its own territory but with in easy reach of it, which might be utilized against itself at some time in the future.

Seemingly the Latin New World peoples are pretty well convinced of Yankee good faith, under the Roosevelt regime, anyway, but apparently, in at least a few cases, they're a bit suspicious of one another.

Fight Frequently

It isn't long, for example, since Paraguay and Bolivia were fighting each other bitterly. It's understandable that neither should fancy the idea of having its own while opponent put in trim for fresh and still more formidable thrust into the Chaco region, claimed by both of them. Ecuador and Peru are on very strained terms now. It isn't so many years since Argentina and Chile barely missed a sizeable conflict.

Buenos Aires, for instance, is far south to be apprehensive of a base at such a city as Barranquilla, Columbia, but it's within a mere hop, by plane from Montevideo, in Uruguay.

These representations don't reach Washington officially, but they are embodied in considerable editorial comment in leading Latin American newspapers. Illustratively, Venezuela would be well satisfied with a Yankee-paid-for base at its port of Caracas but obviously would be uneasy over the creation of one at the not overly distant port of Belém, at the Brazilian mouth of the Amazon. By the same token, Brazil probably would look askance upon a base at Caracas.

—o—

Puzzling Angles

The Latin Americans are puzzling to the State department in a good many respects.

Of all the southern nations Argentina, hitherto, has been the least friendly toward us. Today its foremost in campaigning for Pan-American solidarity, with the United States, of course, included, Brazil, traditionally has liked us. Yet, an issue or two ago, the weekly publication, The Nation, printed an article by Paulo Duarte, himself a Brazilian, denouncing President Getulio Vargas, not only as anti-American, but as a Nazi dictator. True, he hardly pretends that he isn't a dictator. But an anti-Yankee one! And pro-Hitler? Well, there are a lot of Germans in southern Brazil, and a year or so back, they tried to pull off a Nazi putsch. The view with which Vargas squelched it was a caution.

The State department's reckoning is that the Nazis tried to work too fast in Latin America, were caught at it before their program had had time to develop actual results and now find it aborted in every direction.

—o—

A Quisling Wanted

The scheme clearly was to get a native Quisling into office at the head of each regime south of the Rio Grande. This involved over-throwing all existing governments which preferred not to be overthrown, and, as soon as they discovered what was being instigated, put an unceremonious stop to it. Vargas himself did so, what ever may be the merits of Paulo Duarte's criticisms of him.

Argentina, Uruguay, Bolivia and Chile nipped their Nazis' activities in the bud but ordinary methods of legislative investigation, detective and police work and diplomatic expulsions. The southern Brazilian putsch got definitely underway, and military force was required to suppress it. That's because Southern Brazil is almost solidly German, and the attempted revolt there didn't mean much preliminary fixing but practically was spontaneous. Elsewhere Germany is a smaller proportion of the population, advance work was required as necessary, was undertaken overtly itself, attracted premature attention and, from all accounts, out of business.

Cautious at First

One other item enters into the State department's calculation. It's presumed that, when the war started, the Latin American thought that Hitler might win a victory slightly inclined to antagonize him, to the prejudice of the post-war trade relationships with Nazified Old World. The best guess is that they've decided he'll be beaten sooner or later, and don't care how much they hurt his feelings.

A Ride in a Paper Boat

CHAPTER TWENTY

HALLIE MADE up her mind to get a job. But making up her mind and setting out to do it were two quite different things. It was all very well to say, "I'll go get a job tomorrow, Eric. I know you hate the idea, but if we just had a little to depend on I'll get something I can quit as soon as you're on your feet. In the meantime, we'll retrench."

Retrenching, Hallie hoped, wouldn't get to be a habit. There had been the time in New York, and now here she was at what she would have thought of as the last wall to be backed against. How did one live more cheaply than they were living in the boarding house?

Outside help came in the form of a suggestion from one of the extra girls who lived at the boarding house. She knew a young Italian couple who had a room to rent and would allow the Adamases to use their kitchen to prepare their meals. That way, she told them, they could live on $15 a week.

It could be done, Hallie figured, after renting a small, comfortable, clean room from the Casellinis for $25 a month. Rent came to only a little more than $6 a week and Hallie could feed the two of them on seven or eight.

She hadn't the least idea what they'd use for carfare or other sundries. Or, for that matter, how much she could earn.

Thinking this way, she came smack up against the problem of how she would search for a job the next day. In books, and in the movies, the formula called for looking at the classified advertising columns.

She garnered all the morning papers and went through every column religiously. She could find maidans for rent, cooks to hire, valets and secretaries "available," she found columns of cars offered for sale, business partnerships offered "for small investments." Under "Help Wanted," there was opportunity for a mechanic, a computer operator and a worker in bead embroidery. Nothing for an untrained graduate of a fashionable finishing school.

Hallie took her problem to the girl who had suggested the move to the Casellini household.

"Gosh, hon, I wouldn't know what to tell you. What can you do? And without waiting for Hallie to answer humbly, "Nothing," the girl said, "The trouble with getting jobs as a secretary in a studio is they just ain't." And the extra girls grab all the selling jobs there are. Lemme think, I got it!"

Hallie waited eagerly.

Then the girl—her name, she said, was Gracia DeVoe—looked her over from the tips of her polished brogues to the top of her smoothly brushed blond hair. "No,"

Additional Funds Allotted Maryland To Fight Paralysis

Federal Government Will
Grant $6,660 to State
To Aid Victims

BALTIMORE, Oct. 3 (AP)—Dr. R. Riley, director of the state department of health, was notified today the federal government would grant Maryland an additional $6,660 for care of poliomyelitis victims.

General purpose of the funds, he said, was to provide the best care for victims to minimize paralysis and provide them with the best chance of rehabilitation.

In requesting the money, to supplement $5,000 granted earlier in the year by the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, Dr. Riley estimated between 4,000 and 5,000 additional days will be required for patients to receive the fullest benefit of the service offered.

Approximately seventy-five of Maryland's 204 victims have been placed in Baltimore and District of Columbia hospitals for periods of two weeks or more. Others have been treated in their homes. The department of health still is aiding in the care of other children struck by infantile paralysis as long ago as 1928.

The department, to supplement rehabilitation work in the children's hospital school in Baltimore, will all in physiotherapists from the counties. To be brought in for successive two week periods are:

Elma L. Georg, Allegany county teacher, Oct. 16-31; Frederika Campbell, Allegany, Nov. 1-15; Grade M. Jones, Garrett, Nov. 16-30; Helen Garman, Eastern Shore staffer with headquarters in Salisbury, Dec. 1-15; and Ruth McLean, Washington and Frederick county staffer with headquarters at Hagerstown Jan. 16-31.

The new funds, secured under the Social Security act, would enable Dr. Riley said, for transportation of victims to hospitals; transportation of ethnopedic nurses and physiotherapists to home cases, and for increased expenditures for shoes, braces and other appliances.

Toronto splints and frames have been supplied without charge by the Maryland Chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Two Negroes Will Be Given Hearing On Auto Theft

Isaiah H. Pinn and Kenneth L. Pinn, negroes, of Washington, D. C., will be given a preliminary hearing this morning before United States Commissioner James Alvin Avrett on charges of violating the Dyer act in transporting a stolen car across a state line.

The two men were arrested last week near the LaVale barracks of the state police by Corp. A. M. Pinn in a car allegedly stolen from a Pittsburgh, Pa., man. Both men are escaped inmates of training schools for youthful law breakers, officers said. They were arrested on previous occasions for stealing automobiles in the Pittsburgh section.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

A GOOD THING OVERDONE
EVERY GOOD thing is good only so long as it is taken in moderation. To overdo it is to be as badly off as if you didn't have it at all, and perhaps more so. So it is with conservative principles, as well as with bold ones. It is all very well to be careful about raising your partner after you have forced a bid out of him with a double, but to refuse ever to raise him, when he has shown you a fortuitous situation and you have more strength than your double proclaimed, is to defeat the main purpose of a double—to find out whether or not your side has a game, and in what.

And there it was left. North took ten tricks, losing one in hearts and two in diamonds, but could lose no others unless he saw fit to misplay the hand in some grotesque and bizarre fashion.

South overdid badly the business of being afraid to open his mouth after he had compelled his partner to bid. When East overcalled North's 1-Spade response with 2-Diamonds, South should have bid even then, as his hand was well above a minimum double, was made extra good by the fact that club honors and diamond Q sat over East's bids, and also had a splendid fit for his partner's spade suit.

But his later bid of 2-Spades, a mere preference over his partner's voluntary call of 2-Hearts, was terrible. Here was the spot for him to make up for his previous pass, by calling 3-Spades if he felt timid, or 4-Spades if he felt as strong as he should have.

Your Week-End Problem

Why should you raise your partner's dealer bid of 1-Spade on Hand No. 1 below, and pass it with Hand No. 2?

Good for Doughnuts

The well-cooker of your electric stove is fine for frying doughnuts and in it melt enough lard to make at least three inches. Heat it on full heat until fat reaches the desired temperature, then turn to the lowest heat that will maintain that temperature. Drop doughnuts in and cook until brown.

To Re-Crisp Cereals

Packaged ready-to-serve cereals are usually improved in flavor and crispness if heated before serving. This is especially important after the box of cereal has been half used. Simply sprinkle a thin layer of cereal in a shallow pan and heat a couple of minutes in moderate oven or under broiler.

Pet Clubs, Liked By Children, Are Aid to Education

Youngsters Gain Facts, Receive Good Practice at Reading

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

While visiting in hundreds of classrooms throughout the United States, I have seen all sorts of animals in the classroom, from snakes to lambs. Recently in a fifth grade class I witnessed a pet club in action. They were conducting a "quiz" about pets based on newspaper clippings which the club had collected.

Some of the questions asked of the club were: What famous bloodhound retired recently? Where can you see a bird cage worth $250? What is Mickey? What was Laddie? Bull dogs first originated in France, England, Spain?

I asked the children to write and send me an account of their club. Here is what they wrote, in part:

"In the pet club we try to learn more about the care of animals, what they like, how to make them friendly as well as to find out unusual things about them. We try to teach others to be considerate and kind, by our acts, pictures, stories or plays.

Pets Studied in Class

"This year our club has studied several pets in our own school room. We've had rabbits, kittens, dogs, gold fish and even a young goat. Owners have explained how these animals should be handled and fed. Children in the lower grades seem to enjoy hearing these accounts as much as our own members do.

"This term we have collected newspaper and magazine articles about pets. Stories about animals have been most interesting to us. Pupils in other activities have saved many clippings for us.

"A committee studies the clippings, the best ones being read and studied in class. Some are posted on our bulletin board. Those we find most interesting and unusual are placed in a scrap book. Some of our clippings were used by other children in an auditorium program.

"Toward the end of the term we worked out a short program, so we could pass on some of our interesting stories."

In addition to the facts gained by these children and their learning to be kind to animals, they were given good practice at reading from interesting sources. Any child who wished to develop an individual hobby at home or one with several other children might be able to use the best plans of this club, especially that of keeping a scrap book with clippings from newspapers and magazines about pets.

Solving Parent Problems

Q How might a college student who is a poor reader improve his reading skill during the summer vacation?

A. By reading at least two hours every day from some of his high school text books or from books usually read for pleasure by the sixth or seventh grade pupil. He also should do some reading aloud. Even if this student has not considered himself a poor reader but failed or barely passed at college, despite hard study there, he also should practice at daily reading from such books.

Q What do you think of the plan in which a teacher on leaving her class instructs a child of this class

Slowaway Succeeds When Dare Is Fare

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Barbara Cochran, 20, went aboard the S.S. Lurline to see a friend off for Honolulu, and on a dare became a stowaway. She made the trip undetected, and even mingled with passengers on deck and at dances.

Her friends' connivance, she admitted, enabled her to sleep on the floor of the cabin.

Once in Honolulu, an irate father paid her fare back.

Blind Student's Dog Gets College Diploma

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP)—Winifred Moore, 23, and Rex, her shepherd dog, received sheepskins together from Mississippi Southern college.

The dog had guided his blind mistress through three years of college.

"Rex is awarded this certificate of honor for special efforts in leadership and guidance," read a diploma tied to his collar by Dr. J. B. George, college president.

to report to her on her return any child who misbehaved in her absence?

A. I consider it atrocious. If the child is faithful to his trust he may win the enmity of all his classmates; if not, he loses in dependability. In either event he is the larger loser.

Avoidance of Exposure Remains Best Weapon in Infantile Paralysis Fight

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"Doctor, What Can I do?"—Facts about Infantile Paralysis is the name of a pamphlet which contains all the facts of modern medicine about infantile paralysis. It is issued by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, 120 Broadway,

New York, and a copy will be sent free to anyone on application.

The pamphlet describes the symptoms and forms of onset, such things as the proper use of the iron lung, the means by which it is spread from person to person, treatment and availability of care.

Under the head of "Prevention" the foundation has this advice to offer:

"Since there is no specific means of warding off this disease, such as medical science has provided for diphtheria, typhoid fever, smallpox and many of the other contagious illnesses, prevention for the present depends on avoidance of exposure. During an epidemic many carriers and persons with the mild undiagnosable forms of poliomyelitis infection unintentionally and unknowingly spread the virus.

"See that children—and all other members of the household—take nothing in their mouths that have been soiled by the discharges from the bodies of others.

Exposure to Crows

"A hard and fast rule can not be made against swimming.

"Swimming itself is not thought to be harmful, but if the water is contaminated, a definite danger is introduced. If the child meets new people, and is exposed to new crowds, swimming may be a menace. Little is gained if a community closes the schools and swimming places and allows the children to mingle with people on the streets, in stores and other meeting places.

"These are problems that must be considered by the health and medical authorities of each community in the time of danger. The federal government, each state, every large city and many of the counties maintain departments of health staffed with persons competent to advise in such matters.

"A conference of the leading health and medical authorities usually leads to the formation of suggestions designed for a particular community. Parents should study these suggestions with great care and follow them exactly, thereby doing their best to protect themselves and their children, and also serving the rest of the community in which they live."

Brush will be held responsible for any damage which may result from their negligence.

In Memoriam
 In loving memory of my dear son, James L. Linn, who departed this life 10 years ago, October 3, 1931.

When evening shades are falling,
 And I am sitting all alone,
 In my heart there comes a longing,
 If you only could come home.

Oh, and oft my thoughts do wander,
 To your grave so far away,
 Where I laid you dearest Michael,
 Ten years ago today.

Gillette Building, Wrecked by Blast, To Be Torn Down

Decision is Reached after Conference between Officials and Engineers

The three-story brick Gillette building south of the two buildings on North Centre street wrecked by an explosion Thursday afternoon, will be torn down as soon as possible. This action was decided upon yesterday afternoon at a conference in Mayor Harry Irvine's office.

After an inspection of the buckled walls and floors of the structure by Joseph A. Clarke, building engineer for the city of Baltimore; John M. Russell, deputy building engineer for Baltimore; and John M. Ford, chief building inspector of Baltimore; Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer; and Martin M. Corrigan, street superintendent; it was generally agreed the danger of the structure collapsing was imminent.

Jackson Offers Assistance

The Baltimore engineers were sent here by Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore. Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, offering any assistance possible. Clarke only recently completed a survey of 15,000 Baltimore buildings, exclusive of residences, as to their worthiness against blitzkrieg and bombing. He found only 1,100 that he could recommend.

G. Marshall Gillette, of Dubois, Pa., owner of the Gillette building, attended the conference and expressed willingness to comply with the city's request even though it would be mandatory to raze the structure after condemnation had been passed.

Gillette said he had no plans at present for rebuilding upon the site after the building has been torn down. Lichtenstein's Medical Arts Pharmacy, Gooch's fruit market and a vacant store room are on the first floor while the two floors above are used partly as storage space and the rest has been vacant for several years.

Cause Still Unknown

Cause of the explosion had not definitely been determined last night. Five Pittsburgh, Pa., representatives of the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company were on the scene yesterday checking over gas lines and meters.

A. J. McClellan, distribution superintendent for the Pittsburgh district, who has been here for the past few months, said yesterday an inspection revealed no leaks in gas.

Woodrow Willison Files Suit Here For Overtime Pay

Charges Automobile Banking Corporation Owes Him $1,183.34

Suit for overtime compensation was filed in circuit court yesterday against the Automobile Banking Corporation and Harold R. Bush, manager of its Cumberland office, by Woodrow A. Willison, former adjuster for the automobile financing firm.

The suit was filed by Lewis M. Wilson and William R. Carscaden, attorneys, under the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards act of 1938.

Willison claims $1,183.34 as actually due him as overtime pay and asks payment also of an equal amount as "liquidated damages" plus attorney's fees and court costs, as provided in the act.

Says Overtime Not Paid

After setting forth that the ABC is engaged in interstate commerce, financing cars and performing other functions in Maryland, Pennsylvania and West Virginia, the suit alleges that from May 1, 1939, to November 30, 1940, Willison was employed sixty hours a week and was not paid overtime as provided by the federal law. The suit adds that Willison's duties as adjuster for the firm required him to work in both Maryland and West Virginia and occasionally in Pennsylvania.

Elmer B. Gower, attorney, entered his appearance for the defendant corporation.

Nine other lawsuits were filed yesterday as the deadline for closing of the October originals dockets neared. Eight of them were docketed by titling, with no details given.

Other Suits Docketed

These included three docketed by Harold E. Naughton, attorney as follows: Eva L. Dahl vs. the Cumberland Fair Association; George J. Dahl vs. the Cumberland Fair Association; and George L. House vs. Harry E. Flook Jr. Naughton was out of the city last night, and no details were available.

Five were filed by Elmer B. Gower, attorney, as follows: Henry V. Deahl vs. N. E. Crites; Cornelius Dye vs. Jessie Cook; Charles M. Dicken vs. Ellis Shobe and Charles McKelish; Francis D. Smith vs. Harry Robertson; and Janet V. McFarland vs. Matt Cabs, Inc.

Gower said all the suits grew out of automobile accidents. One of an unusual nature is that of Dye vs. Cook, in which Dye is suing Cook as owner of a mule into which Dye's car plowed, killing the animal and badly damaging the automobile.

Freight Derailed, Main Line of B&O Blocked 18 Hours

Deralement of an eastbound Baltimore and Ohio freight train near Hyndman, Pa., yesterday morning still had the main line blocked early this morning, but the dispatcher's office reported it was expected to be cleared by 3 a. m.

All B&O trains were re-routed over the tracks of the Western Maryland railway, and there was no serious traffic tie-up, it was reported.

Twenty-four cars were involved in the deralement, which occurred about 9 a. m., according to reports. There were no casualties, B&O men said here.

Some of the cars were loaded with cattle, and several of the beasts were injured, while others freed from the cars, reportedly roamed away.

Cause of the deralement was not known here last night.

Sears Manager Here Promoted To Chicago Post

Mordock Will Join Company's Sales Promotion Department

John B. Mordock, of 807 MacDonald Terrace, manager of the Sears Roebuck and Company retail store here for the past seven years, has been promoted to a post in the company's home office in Chicago, it was learned yesterday.

Mordock scheduled to report in Chicago October 20, will be engaged in sales promotion in the mail order department preparatory to appointment as a sales manager in the department, it was said.

In the seven years he has been in Cumberland, the Sears official has become identified with many civic activities. He is former chairman of the Mercantile bureau of the chamber of commerce, president of the Cumberland County association, treasurer of the Junior Association of Commerce, former commodore of the Deep Creek Lake Yacht club and a member of the Kiwanis club and the Western Maryland Ski club.

Mordock became connected with the Sears firm eleven years ago in Chicago, his former home, where his parents still live, serving in the merchandise development department. From there he went to the Indianapolis store, then served as manager of stores in Paducah, Ky., and Richmond, Ind.

From Richmond he came here as assistant manager, in which capacity he served for five months before being named manager of the Pittsburgh branch. Shortly afterwards he returned to Cumberland as manager and has been here since.

Mordock married the former Miss Nancy James, and they have one child, John B. Mordock Jr.

DAIRY FARMERS MEET WITH CIO OFFICIALS TO DISCUSS PRICES

Fifty dairy farmers of the Tri-State area met last night at the Windsor hotel with representatives of the Western Maryland Industrial Union Council of the CIO and Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council for the purpose of receiving advice on organization of the farmers and milk shippers of this area.

Prime purpose of the conference, according to Katz, was bringing about better prices for the dairy farmers product from dairies. The farmers were emphatic in their assertions that the price increase should be absorbed by the dairies and not passed on to the consumer, Katz added.

Katz was sent here by the national office of the CIO upon request of farmers in this area. The CIO does not intend to organize them into a farmer's union but will cooperate and assist the farm dairymen in achieving their purpose, Katz said.

A joint committee of farmers and members of the Western Maryland Industrial Union Council to be known as the Farmer-Labor Fraternal Cooperative Committee will work together in the future, Katz declared.

She described them as the World's Student Federation; the International Missionary Council; the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work; faith and order movement and the World Council of Churches.

Tells of Conferences The speaker said the religious groups have held six great conferences in recent years and asserted that "we realize the 650,000,000 members of Christian churches could be more effective in producing world order if all worked together. ## Conviction of Quartet Affirmed by Judges Sloan and Huster

Two men and two women accused of extracting the coins from slot machines by means of drills were banished from the Free State of Maryland yesterday afternoon after paying fines and court costs totaling $224.95.

Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judge William A. Huster quickly affirmed a magistrate's conviction of the quartet on petty larceny charges after an all-day appeal hearing in circuit court, but drastically modified the sentences.

Penalty Tamed Too Severe

The two men, Virgil E. Norton, of Portland, Ore., and Herschel L. Blackwell, of St. Louis, Mo., had been sentenced to eighteen months in the House of Correction by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce Jr. Three months in the county jail was the penalty meted out in the lower court to the two women, Mrs. Ollie Miller Reynolds, of Dallas, Tex., and Miss Ida M. Christian, of Little Rock, Ark.

After pronouncing the four guilty at the end of the case without ever leaving the bench, the two jurists retired to chambers to confer on the sentencing. They took with them copies of the criminal records of the two men.

Emerging a few minutes later, Judge Sloan began by commenting that it was the opinion of the court that the sentences imposed below were "entirely too severe."

The jurist pointed out that there was no evidence whatever to show that the quartet was armed when they looted slot machines at the Clary Club Aug. 28 and the amount involved was approximately $20. Had they been armed, he said, it would have been a serious matter.

Women Are Paroled

Imposing $50 fines on each of the four, Judge Sloan paroled the women for eighteen months on condition that they "get out of Mary-

$500 Damages Are Sought from C.I.T. By Walter R. Beall

Suit Charges Illegal Seizure of His Delivery Truck

Charging illegal seizure of his delivery truck, Walter R. Beall, proprietor of a Cumberland cleaning establishment, yesterday filed suit in circuit court against the C.I.T. Corporation asking $500 damages.

The suit, filed by James Alfred Aviret, attorney, says that on July 14 the defendant firm, through its attorneys and agents, caused a $321.30 judgment to be "improperly" entered by confession against Beall without his knowledge or authorization and without due process of law. The following month, it goes on, the C.I.T. levied execution on the judgement and caused Beall's delivery car to be seized and impounded.

Judgment Not Explained

The basis for the judgment was not explained in the suit, but it is understood that Beall bought a stoker from a Cumberland plumbing firm and gave a note for the balance due on the purchase price. This note was assigned to C.I.T. by the firm, and Beall allegedly defaulted on the payments later as a result of a dispute with the plumbing firm concerning the performance of the stoker.

Apparently through an error, the judgment was entered against him without his being given an opportunity to defend the suit. Such a procedure is provided for in some notes, which authorize the holder to enter what is known as a "confessed judgment," but such was not the case here, and the court subsequently granted a motion to strike out the judgment and release the delivery car.

Lost Customers

Beall's suit, in asking damages of $500, declares that he was forced to incur the expense of employing

Former Resident Attacked, Beaten Here by Negroes

Joseph Remeth Is In Hospital with Broken Leg and Collar Bone

Joseph Remeth, 32, who told police last night he was gagged, beaten and robbed of $3 by three unidentified negroes in an Allegheny hospital with a broken right leg, a fractured collar bone and a dislocated shoulder.

Police received a call at 8:50 to come to Piedmont avenue between Shriver and Columbia streets. Detective R. E. Flynn and Officer John Powers investigated and found a man lying on the side of the road, gagged with a piece of pasteboard and lying on his back.

After Flynn removed the gag, Remeth told him he had been held up by three negroes.

The officers turned the man over and found his arms tied with a red bandanna handkerchief. The man could not stand up. The officers placed him on a stretcher and took him to Allegheny hospital dispensary.

Remeth told police that his assailants did not have a gun; that they just jumped on him and twisted his arm. The fractured leg, probably, was suffered in the struggle, officers said.

The man told Flynn that he was going north on Piedmont avenue when the negroes came up behind him and attacked him, saying that they wanted his money.

A wallet, found ten feet from the wounded man, was empty save for several religious medals and a health certificate from a Pennsylvania doctor.

Remeth, who told officers he had $3 in his wallet, did not know how long he had lain beside the road, but a passenger on the bus that leaves for Piedmont avenue at 8:15 disclosed that a woman passenger had seen a white man standing near the scene about 8:25 o'clock holding a cardboard box in his arms.

The victim, who lived here when a child, has no permanent address. He lived for a short time recently in Brainards, N. J. He is single, five feet eleven inches tall and weighs 170 pounds.

Kelly and Union Near Agreement, Mel Fiske Says

Progress Is Made Toward Contract with Few Points Yet Unsettled

Only a few points in the "agreement already reached" by Local 26 of the United Rubber Workers of America and the Kelley-Springfield Tire Company, have yet to be ironed out," Mel Fiske, local labor representative, said in a statement made last night in behalf of the union.

Negotiations between the company and the union "are nearing an end," it was stated, with progress made "toward a contract seeking to guarantee forms of job security."

Fiske said that S. H. Daivymple, of Akron, international president of the United Rubber Workers, and other international officers of the union, are assisting Local 26 negotiators in conferences with company officials.

One of the principal demands of the Kelly union, was announced as the restoration of seniority to men furloughed and later rehired. Another demand is for a two-weeks vacation with pay for workers with five years' service or more. Over and above these and other specific demands, the workers are seeking especially a "written agreement" governing hours, existing wages and working conditions to "guarantee their security in the Kelly plant," Fiske said.

It was stated that discrepancies exist between hours and wages in other Goodyear plants and the Kelly plant, a Goodyear subsidiary. The six-hour day obtains in the other plants as against the eight-hour day here, it was stated. Agreements made by the union in these other plants will not be signed until the Kelly workers ratify their contract, Fiske said.
